

LEGO

FREE!

AFOOLS

#1

A HUMOUROUS LOOK AT THE ADULT FAN OF LEGO® UNIVERSE!

SEE:

ALL-NIGHT
BUILDING!

BUYING SETS!

SEARCHING FOR PARTS!

by Greg Hyland

with Jake McKee

A message from the LEGO Company owner, Kjeld Kirk Kristiansen

In the early days of the LEGO® system, my father sat down and wrote out “The 10 LEGO criteria for a good toy”. That list was pretty amazing, and still holds value to this day. In recent years, one item in particular has taken on new meaning for me.

“LEGO – fun for every age”

At the LEGO Company, we know that there has always been some amount of adults building with the LEGO bricks. But with the advent of the Internet, adult hobbyists around the world are connecting with each other and with the hobby like never before. Some adult hobbyists haven't played with LEGO bricks since they were children, some never stopped. As I've watched the adult community grow, I am continually amazed at the skill and enthusiasm of the fans.

If this is your first exposure to the adult LEGO community, let me welcome you. You're about to meet some talented and friendly people who will amaze you every day. I encourage you to find other adult hobbyists on the Web or in your local neighborhood. Build, create, share – and most importantly, have fun!

Play Well!

Kjeld

*For fans,
by fans!*

comics
written and drawn by Greg Hyland

coloured by Greg Hyland

Nadine Wettlaufer

edited by
Jake
McKee

photos by
Todd Lehman

Calum Tsang

Special thanks to:
John McCormack,
Todd Lehman, Calum
Tsang and all the members of r1Toronto,
John Kovalic, Christina Hitchcock, and to everyone on
LUGNET
(www.lugnet.com) and
From Bricks To
Bothans (www.fbtb.net)
who gave us
suggestions and
feedback on this project.

Editor's note: Referring to LEGO bricks as "Legos" is an incorrect use of the trademark to refer to building bricks in a generic way.

Adult LEGO fans are some of the most playful, inventive, and genuine people you will ever meet.

Their outlook is practical, their craft is exquisite.

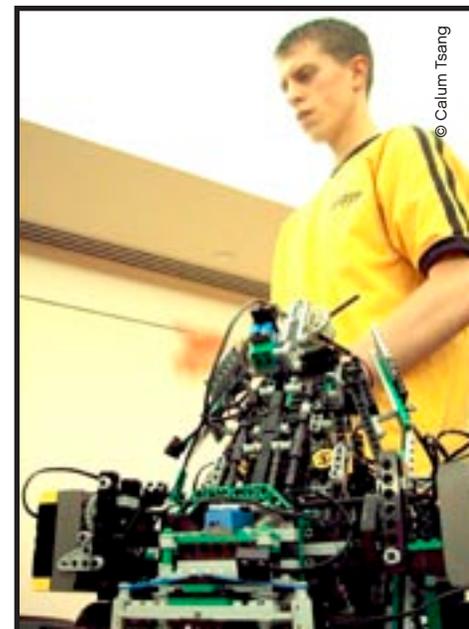

Whether friend, family, or curious observer, you can enjoy the magic when AFOLs put their minds together. LEGO fan communities, local and global, balance similarity with diversity, welcoming new people and sharing ideas for constant synergy.

To understand the AFOL is to become the AFOL. Try it: Sit down sometime with a pile of bricks and do what comes naturally.

For the love of the LEGO brick in all of its variations, AFOLs create.

When you're ready to share your creations and learn about new techniques and all sorts of other wonderful things, a whole world awaits you!

Todd Lehman
LUGNET co-founder

© Todd S. Lehman

“I am amazed at the skill and enthusiasm of this community.”
-Kjeld Kirk Kristiansen
LEGO Company owner

The LEGO fan universe is huge!
Local offline fan groups,
countless Web sites, and AFOLs like you are all over.
To find more information and
resources about AFOLs and the LEGO fan
community, visit
www.LEGOFan.org!

© Calum Tsang

© Todd S. Lehman

© Todd S. Lehman

© Todd S. Lehman